The UCLA Center for Language, Interaction, and Culture (CLIC) is happy to offer its first summer workshop August 4-24, 2024. The workshop will explore ways to analyze language use in social interaction and learn how social interactional and usage-based approaches to language can be applied to language teaching and learning.

This workshop is aimed at graduate students and faculty who would like to learn more about conversation analysis, interactional linguistics or a general approach to the study of talk in interaction and who would benefit from improving their academic English (e.g., improving English presentation, writing, or reading skills). This workshop is not intended for US-based students or faculty nor those with strong English proficiency or advanced CA training. If you are not sure whether this workshop is right for you, please contact us (see contact below).
